ing that the management of the civil affairs of the Colony would full mainly upon Municipality. In previous discussions on this subject the question of establishing a Municipal Council was presented from different standpoint. The chief difficulty which we have hitherto felt to be in the way of a Municipal Council was the separation of duties which were purely municipal from those that were peculiarly administrative. Under the proposed military governorship, there would necessarily be a triple division of functions, which may be called Military: Departmental, and Municipal. The retention of the present arrange ment of a Civil-Governor appears to us to simplify the working of a Municipal body; and this is something which goes to the credit of the present system tem.
